

Preparations

Joseph Parish

Things do not look good in our country these days. we have Americans fighting Americans, hate and related hate groups are in abundance at every turn we make. We are certainly in an odd predicament these days. We didn't want it this way, and no logically thinking individual likes things this way. In either case the fact remains that we are in the situation, and we may as well prepare properly in order to protect our life, and that of our families. With that being said, I will present a guideline for you to follow each day. Perfect this rule, and make sure you know how it applies to your situation. The key to surviving anything tossed your way is to be prepared.

The first hint to ensure your survival in bad times will be to understand that during these turbulent times there will be power outages, Looting and your grocery store shelves will quickly be emptied. We see this during every emergency from hurricanes to other strange phenomena. Having your supplies on hand and ready at all times is a great advantage in emergency times. You are completely relaxed as the others are scurrying about in panic and chaos. So, as you can see our first tip is simply to be prepared.

Alright folks, on with the second tip of being prepared when the SHTF. In our second idea, I would like to stress keeping a low profile. Don't try to advertise gigantic procedures as they are sure to attract the attention of others and unfortunately it might not be those kinds of people you want to know your plans.

In all walks of life, we will likely find people who are not properly preparing themselves for bad times and their plan is to take what others have worked so hard to achieve, these are the types of people that you do not want to know your business and how you are preparing for bad times. Restrict your survival plans to your family and trusted friends that you know very well. Keep in mind even though you may be at odds with a family member it is far more beneficial to surround yourself with people which you know rather than complete strangers.

In the same sense do not place your trust in the authorities such as police or military members. Whenever a disaster may strike do not expect the protectors of our society to be available to help and aid you. These are people also and they have families that they are concerned about so naturally their immediate families will have priority over you and yours. Additionally, these people will have better weapons than you and much more superior training than you might have. You would not want to have a gunfight with experienced fighters if it can be avoided.

I would not be surprised if some of our military divisions were to turn rogue when the SHTF. Those protectors who may actually care about the people will likely be home with their own family and not traveling around the area in armed mobs. I advise not making contact with these types of groups or you will possibly lose your supplies, weapons and even your life.
